Radio production came to a halt as well and there were literally thousands of these Philco radio car chassis sitting in warehouses. So, in order to have something to put in stores, Philco and Motorola had cabinets made and installed the automobile radios in them and converted them to run off of AC power. 182	Circa 1960 Steiff Zebra Store Display	Information from head Steiffologist for Worthpoint.com: This is a 1960 Steiff Studio display piece 150cm lifesize Schautier Zebra. He is Mohair and wood shaving or excelsior stuffed, his insides have a strong metal frame skeleton that when new was strong enough to hold a regular size adult and would very easily hold a child. This piece would have been very labor intensive and expensive to make as it would have taken almost 2 weeks to be hand stuffed. He was most likely made for a store window display for a major department store or possibly even a doctor's office or something along those lines and would have been very limited production, special order type piece with possibly no more than 25 made as he was not a general catalog order inventory type piece and are assuming as much with this piece as he has the original Steiff Made In Germany Tag & Button in his ear with a hand written catalog or inventory type code # on it. His mohair is in excellent condition with hardly any wear, he has his original glass eyes and wonderful original hand airbrushed stripes. In 2004, the same Zebra sold at auction for a little over $2000. This guy is in very good condition and would make a wonderful addition to your Steiff collection.
